New Screen Magazine

No. 32.

One Reel

SCREEN Magazine No. 32 opens with a little lesson in the gentle game of golf, which builds up the physique and vocabulary, given by W. C. Skelly. The American Museum of Natural History then gives us a little lecture on the knives and forks of the animal kingdom. Mr. Elephant's tooth sure is a picnic-grounds for a toothache. Mr. Louis J. Brotton, who, despite his eighty-three years, saws wood for half the folks of Alameda, Cal., to protect his waning strength devised a windmill saw, and lets the gentle zephyrs do his work. Lillian Russel gives a lesson on the care of the hands; the U. S. Bureau of Chemistry gives us some very useful information on how to tell when eggs are fresh; our chemist gives us a glimpse of the fascinating but expensive pastime of burning diamonds; and a futurist movie of Hon. Josephus Daniels completes this issue.
